PART 2: COURSE DETAILS

AIMS AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

Aims

The aims of the course are:

1. To locate the media in its cultural, economic and socio-political contexts.
2. To equip students with the ability to critically evaluate and to synthesize a range of theoretical approaches and practices found within media studies and to apply these to a range of contexts.
3. To enable students to pursue a professional career in a range of media and media-related industries.

Learning outcomes

The outcomes of the main award provide information about how the primary aims are demonstrated by students following the course. These are mapped to external reference points where appropriate<sup>4</sup>.

Skills

Includes intellectual skills (i.e. generic skills relating to academic study, problem solving, evaluation, research etc.) and professional/practical skills.

By the end of the course, students will be able to demonstrate:

1. Knowledge and theory

[LO 1]The ability to understand and critically analyze the theory and practice of a variety of media to include form, content, distribution and consumption.

[LO 2] The ability to critically evaluate and synthesize a range of theoretical approaches found within media studies and to apply these in a range of contexts.

[LO 3]The ability to contribute to the development of media products, services and industries.

[LO 4]The ability to think critically and imaginatively, to read widely and with understanding, and to communicate clearly in spoken and written English.

2. Intellectual skills

By the end of the course, students will have:

[LO 5]An informed and critical understanding of the management and development of media industries in a creative and globalized economy.

[LO 6]Critical understanding of a variety of processes and techniques of media production and an insight into their practical application.

[LO 7]Analytical ability in the interpretation and consumption of media forms.

[LO 8]The ability to evaluate theories surrounding the use of media in social and cultural contexts.

[LO 9]A critical awareness of the socio-political, cultural, economic and technological contexts within which media services and industries operate.

<sup>4</sup> Please refer to Course Development and Review Handbook or QAA website for details.

	[LO 10]An ability to produce and critically reflect on media texts. [LO 11]The ability to select and apply appropriate methods for research. [LO 12]The ability to undertake in-depth research for the dissertation/production project. 3. Professional/practical skills [LO 13]The ability, through industry placement, to contextualize theory with practice and have a deeper understanding of the relevance of their study to media industries. [LO 14]The ability to participate and contribute as professionals in a media environment. 4. Generic/transferable skills [LO 15]Organizing and presenting arguments, orally and in writing. [LO 16]Develop learning capacities through active participation in seminars and the production of increasingly rigorous written work. [LO 17]Working in groups. [LO 18]Critically evaluating and reflecting on their own work.
QAA subject benchmark statement (where applicable) <sup>5</sup>	The final award of the BA (Hons)/DipHE/CertHE Media Studies conforms to the QAA subject benchmark statement for communication, media, film and cultural studies which has been key in the development of the course aims and outcomes and has informed the teaching and assessment strategies. The course content has been developed based on and mapped to the most current subject benchmarks and the Course Review and staff tutors have worked with the current benchmarks. The entire matrix of modules, old and new, captures all the benchmarked attributes. We continue to integrate theory and practice within this degree structure, through critical analysis and creative interventions and by attention to all modalities of writing to produce material/print and digital papers and audio-visual artefacts. This Media Studies qualification is able to demonstrate with clarity attention and allegiance to national standards, while also incorporating the best of international scholarship.

LEARNING AND TEACHING
Learning and teaching methods

<sup>5</sup>Please refer to the QAA website for details.

This section sets out the primary learning and teaching methods, including total learning hours and any specific requirements in terms of practical/ clinical-based learning. The indicative list of learning and teaching methods includes information on the proportion of the course delivered by each method and details where a particular method relates to a particular element of the course.

The overall strategy for learning and teaching adheres to the current University of Brighton Learning and Teaching strategy and embeds the key principles outlined in the University of Brighton guidance for sustainable development. The curriculum used in this course is grounded in student-centred learning, is delivered through teaching and learning approaches that develop sustainability and encourage reflection and critical thinking across the whole programme, and promotes life-long learning.

The philosophy of our learning and teaching provision promotes critical thinking and reflective practice and facilitates students' active engagement in the learning process. This is achieved through:

- engagement in a broad and contextualised appreciation of the environmental, social, political and economic dimensions of media theory and practice by reading, debating and engagement in creative, production practice
- problem solving through coursework, individual group based projects, class participation and independent research
- critical reflection.

This process of self-development encourages the acquisition of lifelong learning skills and the ability to critically evaluate students' own practice and that of others throughout the course. In that way students develop a portfolio of skills and competencies that are essential for undergraduate study whilst also providing grounding for post-graduate study and professional engagement with the media and creative industries in the digital economy.

The learning and teaching approaches support the overall objectives of the course and the learning outcomes of modules. The suite of modules we offer has been designed to allow students to develop and build on their knowledge, skills and professionalism as they progress through the course. Out of the 17 modules a student would typically take to attain a BA (Hons) in Media Studies, 6 are compulsory and 2 of these are mandatory. Through their compulsory modules students develop a solid and cohesive knowledge base as a cohort which reflects the heart of this dynamic discipline in terms of:

- A coherent knowledge of the media, communication and cultural forms and processes
- an understanding of a range of concepts, theories and approaches appropriate to the study of those objects and processes, and the capacity to apply these
- skills in critical analysis, research practice and communication of knowledge, as well as an array of generic and creative skills.

The remaining 11 module choices a student would take are electives.

The degree is structured around a spine of two compulsory/mandatory modules at each level (apart from Level 4/Semester 1 where there are two compulsory modules) with students configuring a path through the degree via the selection of elective modules. All modules are worth 20 credits, with the exception of the dissertation/production project, which is worth 40 credits, and makes up the mandatory element of Level 6.

Level 4

At level 4, students take modules that lay the foundations for their study and develop their academic reasoning, writing and study skills. The three compulsory modules at level 4, LM167 Media, Culture and Change, LM113 Critical Approaches to Media and LM118 Producing and Consuming Social Media provide a thorough grounding in two important ways:

- Firstly, they equip students with a knowledge and understanding of: media history and the social, economic and political changes associated with the development of new media forms (LM167); the socio-technical and cultural contexts of digital, social media production and consumption as well as their future developments and impact (LM118); ways of understanding and theorizing the media (LM113).
- Secondly, they provide a 'scaffold' for the critical engagement with readings, and the development of evaluation and research skills, including digital information skills in online content sourcing, creation and sharing which are necessary for students to successfully complete their studies.

Through the assessment strategies, students will begin their journey to information literacy gaining an understanding of what will be expected from them during their academic career. Assignments enable tutors to introduce the conventions of academic writing and referencing gradually, easing the often difficult transition for students between Secondary/FE and HE. Students are additionally supported by dedicated sessions:

1. An introduction to studentcentral delivered by the Learning Advisors aligned to our programme of courses during Fresher's week.
2. A Library quiz session run in collaboration with the library.
3. A Plagiarism - Citation/Quotation/Annotation session currently delivered in the Media, Culture and Change (LM167) core module.

The elective choices include

- Film Studies
- Television Studies
- Media in the Networked Society
- Popular Culture
- Sound and Media Culture
- Video
- Photography
- Social Action and Community Media
- Business, Creative Industries and Innovation
- Creative Industries and Promotional Cultures
- Understanding Audiences: Theory & Context

The elective choices at Level 4 (1 module in semester one and 2 in semester two), enable students to engage with both production-based and theory and critical analysis modules.

Level 5

At Level 5 students take one mandatory module, Media Placement (LM290), and one compulsory module, Research Methods & Methodology (LM220). Media Placement (LM290) provides students with the opportunity to apply theory and practice learned thus far on the course within in a media industry environment. LM220 equips students with the knowledge and skills to execute independent research at Level 6 as part of the dissertation/production project (LM394/LM391/LM392/LM395).

Practice-based elective choice at Level 5 mirrors the practice-based elective choices offered at Level 4. The choice of electives in theory and critical analysis allows students to develop and deepen their knowledge in further areas of interest within Media Studies (such as LM244 Visual Media Culture; LM222 Language, Media & Power; LM286 Popular Music) as well as modules which offer an application of theory in practice: Social Media Applications in Activism, Business and Life (LM218) and Journalism (LM276). Students can also take electives that focus on Media enterprise and innovation such as Digital Media Enterprise and Innovation (LM242), Brands and Branding (LM243) and Media Project Management (LM245).

Level 6

At Level 6 the mandatory dissertation/production-based dissertation is the most important single element of the course: Through this large research project students have the opportunity to work under the guidance of one supervisor to demonstrate their ability to synthesize their knowledge gained over the course in a sustained piece of writing/production of an artefact and critical reflection. This module, worth 40 credits, thus makes up the mandatory element of the degree at this level.

Students can choose from a variety of elective modules which enable them to further develop their particular interests through the degree e.g. marketing via LM319 Marketing, film, via LM385 Genre and Film; community-based media via LM376 Community Project; socio-political and critical debates via LM333 Mediating Science and Technology and LM321 National and Global Media as well as Sustainability and Innovation in Digital Culture (LM343); policy debates via LM322 Media Policy: The politics and economics of the media industries; marketing via Digital Media Marketing and Innovation (LM344) ; as well as modules on new and emerging areas of intellectual inquiry and creative practice in media, film and cultural studies such as Celebrity Media (LM321), Transmedia Cultures (LM342) and Critical Approaches to the Videogame (LM340).

This learning and teaching strategy is designed to encourage a positive approach to learning and the student experience of university life; mirror media practice/work practices in media industries as applicable; promote lifelong learning; promote the students' independence and responsibility for their own learning.

Scheduled learning activities comprise lectures, seminars, tutorials, practical classes and workshops, project supervision, fieldwork, and work-based learning. Whilst predominantly on-campus based for most modules, learning is additionally facilitated on line through synchronous or asynchronous modes (e.g. Skype one-to-one project tutorials and discussion forums on StudentCentral).

Variations in learning activities will relate the specific learning approach and the learning outcomes of the module. Individual module-level variations in learning environments are detailed (see appendix 1 & 2).

ASSESSMENT

Assessment methods

This section sets out the summative assessment methods on the course and includes details on where to find further information on the criteria used in assessing coursework. It also provides an assessment matrix which reflects the variety of modes of assessment, and the volume of assessment in the course.

The course is designed to actively engage students in the assessment process. It provides clear information in order for students to understand their assessment tasks and marking criteria. Students are provided with the assessment tasks and marking criteria at the start of each module. Coursework feedback comprises marking grids together with formative feedback enabling students to see how marks have been awarded and how to develop their future work. All modules have a written component to their assessment. There are two optional modules that have examinations (LM111 and LM321).

The Assessment Strategy of the course adheres to the University's Assessment Policy. The assessments are aligned to the Learning Outcomes for the modules and the Course as a whole and provide a range of opportunities for students to demonstrate their learning. The separate module descriptors specify the assessment formats in more detail and maps these against module learning outcomes.

The table below maps the Learning Outcomes (Knowledge and Theory & Skills) of the BA (Hons) Media Studies to the assessment methods, modules and credits.
