Data Protection Notification

Both Sussex and Brighton are Higher Education institutions in England and Wales, and with regard to the sharing and processing of personal Data are both Data Controllers for Brighton and Sussex Medical School.

Data Protection Officers from Brighton and Sussex are responsible for advising BSMS on compliance with Data Protection legislation and monitoring its performance against it.

Personal data we collect about you and how we use it

During the course of your involvement with BSMS, you will be a member and, in some cases, a data subject of both the University of Brighton and University of Sussex; you will be able to access all facilities and support offered by both Universities. To facilitate this access, your personal data will be processed and shared between both institutions.

Administrative responsibilities for personal data have been delegated as follows:

- Prospective and current enrolled students will have student contracts with the University of Brighton
- Academic and professional services staff will hold contracts of employment with the University of Sussex
- BSMS Alumni relations is overseen by the University of Sussex.
- Research participants will have their data processed by the University of Sussex, with some data held on the University of Brighton IT networks.

For staff and students, the University of Brighton will allocate and maintain IT accounts, including allocation of a BSMS.ac.uk email account. This account will authenticate users to access both Brighton and Sussex systems, which include online storage, library access etc

Information is collected in several different ways dependent on your interaction with the Universities and personal data is processed for the purposes outlined below.

Prospective and current enrolled students

When you apply to study at BSMS, we collect and process your information in order to process your application, assess your suitability to attend one of our courses, and communicate with you about decisions on your application, and about preparing for university.

We create a record in your name, with a unique student number, login id and university email address. To that record we add information that you give us when registering or enrolling and throughout your studies. We keep records of your participation in learning activities and your use of other services we offer, e.g. disability services, library and employability services.
We also have a duty to report to statutory authorities on data such as the qualifications our applicants enter university with.

Academic and professional services staff

The information you provide during the recruitment process will be used for the purpose of progressing your application, or to fulfil legal or regulatory requirements if necessary. If you accept a final offer from us, you enter into a contract as an employee and data is required to facilitate that – for example to pay you in accordance with your contract and to administer pension’s entitlements.

In some cases, the University of Sussex needs to process data to ensure that it is complying with its legal obligations. For example, it is required to check an employee's entitlement to work in the UK, to deduct tax, to comply with health and safety laws and to enable employees to take periods of leave to which they are entitled.

Alumni

When you leave the Brighton and Sussex Medical School, we will use your data to facilitate an ongoing relationship between you and the Universities of Brighton and Sussex – this includes fundraising, promotion of alumni events and reunions, engagement with alumni mentoring and volunteering. The University of Sussex’s Development and Alumni Relations Privacy Notice provides further information on how your data is used.

We will also use your information to facilitate the Graduate Outcomes survey which is a survey of the perspectives and status of recent graduates.

Research

If you participate in research conducted by the Brighton and Sussex Medical School which includes your personal data, it will be processed in accordance with the University of Sussex’s Code of Practice for Research. Further information about how your personal data will be used can be found within our Research policies and will you be provided with specific information at the start of the research project.

Research data may be held within the IT networks of the University of Sussex and / or the University of Brighton.

Special category data

Some personal information used for the above purposes will be ‘special categories of personal data’. These can include race and ethnicity for the monitoring of our equalities responsibilities for example, or medical information relating to the delivery of necessary learning support.

Access to and the sharing of this kind of ‘special category’ personal information is controlled very carefully.

Personal information related to criminal convictions and offences will only be used under the control of official authority or where processing is authorised by the law.

Who has access to data?
